

Presenting with Impact: advanced presentation skills

What makes a successful presentation? You know you nailed it when you see eye contact, participation and feel sense of connection with your audience.

An outstanding presenter uses well organized ideas and concepts, a clear vocal delivery and an effective way to handle visuals.

You've presented successfully when your audience understands and remembers you and your points. Ideally, you'll have motivated people to further engage, ask questions and take action.

We can help you achieve the above, even when English is the second language, your audience is diverse, international or entirely new to your subject.

The workshop kicks off by reviewing good practice in presenting skills. This allows delegates to get an idea of where they currently stand as speakers. The seminar then moves up a couple of gears to stretch participants by putting them through more challenging activities and provides the support and training to give memorable presentations and enable the speakers to really connect with your audiences.

The session will explore a range of concepts and tools such as:

- Tricks and tips for delivering virtual presentations
- The three pillars: presence, engagement, and content
- Hooking the audience and keeping them with you
- Creating presence: using body language, eye contact and voice
- Shaping an effective presentation: the beginning, middle and end
- Getting your message across more effectively by using: visual aids, stories and slides.
- Working with international audiences: key do's and don'ts

There is a strong focus on constructive feedback to enable delegates to develop a critical awareness of themselves and others as effective presenters.
